

Psych Meds Linked To 90% of School Shootings

Expert: Psychiatric drugs likely cause of Lanza's extreme violence

December 18, 2012

by Jerome R. Corsi Email | Archive

Jerome R. Corsi, a Harvard Ph.D., is a WND senior staff reporter. He has authored many books, including No. 1 N.Y. Times best-sellers "The Obama Nation" and "Unfit for Command." Corsi's latest book is "Where's the REAL Birth Certificate?" More ↓

A note from Pastor Kevin Lea follows this article.

NEW YORK – From the moment news emerged Friday that a young man had carried out a horrific massacre of elementary-school children, politicians from local city halls to the White House have been restoking the age-old push for more gun control. While guns have been a common denominator in mass slayings at schools by teens, there's another familiar element that seems increasingly to be minimized.

Some 90 percent of school shootings over more than a decade have been linked to a widely prescribed type of antidepressant called selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors or SSRIs, according to British psychiatrist Dr. David Healy, a founder of RxISK.org, an independent website for researching and reporting on prescription drugs.

Though there has been no definitive confirmation that drugs played a role in the Newtown, Conn., assault, that killed 20 children and six adults, media have cited family members and acquaintances saying suspect Adam Lanza was taking prescription medication to treat "a neurological-development disorder," possibly Aspergers.

Healy cautioned that the public needs "to wait to find out what Adam Lanza was on, and whether his behavior does fit the template of a treatment-induced problem."

However, in an email to WND, he said he suspected prescribed psychiatric medications was the cause of Lanza's violent behavior.

Healy said that while the public waits to learn more about Lanza, there are two general points that can be made.

First, he said, "psychotropic drugs of pretty well any group can trigger violence up to and including homicide."

"Second, the advocates of treatment claim both that it is the illness and not the drugs that causes violence and that we are leaving huge numbers of people untreated."

But Healy argued that if this were the case,...

To read this article in its entirety, go to: <http://www.wnd.com/2012/12/psych-meds-linked-to-90-of-school-shootings/>

Note from Pastor Kevin Lea: Absent from this article is any discussion of the spiritual dimension that surrounds us. In Jesus' day, parents were bringing their children to Him to have demons cast out (Mark 9:14-29). Today, all abnormalities in behavior are psychologically diagnosed as some form of “mental disease”; which all require either therapy and/or drugs.

However, not all abnormal behaviors can be explained away as mental disease. For example, what mental disease causes a man to strip naked in broad daylight along a busy road and then rip the cloths off of his victim before he gouges out the victims eyes and starts chewing his face off? Then when the police arrive, he growls at them like a rabid dog. After being shot once, he growls even more viciously, causing the police to shot again in order to end the attack.

<http://miami.cbslocal.com/2012/05/26/miami-police-confrontation-men-leaves-1-dead-1-hurt/>.

At first, investigators wanted to blame his action on “bath salts,” the name of a new street drug that has caused bizarre behavior. But the autopsy proved that he was not on bath salts but had recently smoked some marijuana.

This attack made national news in May of 2012. I read about it just before my Thursday night ministry to the incarcerated at the Kitsap County Jail in Port Orchard, Washington. The 28 inmates that I have a chance to minister to had seen the breaking news on the TV and wanted to talk about it. They asked what I thought. I told them I believed it was a case of the attacker being demon possessed, and that it was the demon or demons in him that caused him to do this otherwise inexplicable act of evil.

I was not surprised that they agreed with me. I asked all of them if they believed in demons. Every hand went up. I asked how many of them had seen demons; most of the hands were up. I asked how many of those who had seen demons were drug abusers, especially those using methamphetamines. Every hand stayed up. Then some gave me accounts of the demons and demonic activity they had personally experienced.

I believed these men because their response was consistent with the dozens of other accounts I have been given over the years as a pastor by those who have lived their lives playing in the world and dancing with the devil in the use of drugs and other “dark” practices. I told them how ironic it is that they all believe in demons (mostly because they have seen them or are close to those who have), but that the average citizen thinks that demons don’t exist.

I have been doing my own amateur study on school shooters over the years and have also noted (as this author has) that nearly all of them have been under psychiatric care with the associated taking of mind control drugs. I have been trying to determine which comes first: The child becomes demon possessed, his parents/teachers are at wits end to deal with the “abnormal behavior” and take him to the shrink to get a diagnosis (and some drugs), or; a problem child is taken to the shrink to get a diagnosis and some drugs which do not cure the patient and instead often make things worse with time, possibly indicating that the drugs have actually opened the door for demons to control their lives.

In either case, what often happens is that these children will at times exhibit behavior that is best explained as demonically evil, as we see to the extreme in Adam Lanza . I agree with the author that the mind drugs appear to play a very similar role to the drugs my inmate friends were telling me resulted in scary demonic visitations and control of their lives.

So is it possible that Adam Lanza was actually possessed by a demon? I believe it is, and that his continuing decay into darkness, with one report saying he was going gothic, is indicative of someone who is under the control of demonic forces. Could the mind drugs have opened the door to demonic forces taking over his life. I believe this is also possible. One thing is for sure, assuming the story we are being told is true, only an evil beyond human understanding (demonic) could cause a young man to go into a room of 1st graders and murder every one of them.

But what if the story we are being told is not true. Local news video footage taken during the unfolding events that day proves that the police chased down, captured and in one case put in handcuffs at least two others that were outside of the Newtown Connecticut School when they arrived on scene.

Were they innocent bystanders that were later released after the police realized they were not complicit? Were they actually the perpetrators of the evil murders (including the killing of Adam, who they left inside of the school to become the patsy), as some are speculating in the conspiracy theory world? Or is there some other reason that these men were taken into custody but then later released (without a word of admission to these facts or explanation for why they occurred from the police or news media)?

We may never know the answer since the media is not asking these questions nor giving us answers so that we can be fully informed, but if there is an even darker side to this horrific nightmare of death, then we can be sure the demons are in control of some very powerful people in high places and We The People are in for some very serious trouble.

But why now? These events were non-existent when I was growing up. My parents did not worry that I might be abducted or killed when I left the house to go to school, or when I told them that I was going to another section of the store and would be right back.

The sense of safety and security is nearly non-existent in our culture today, and a parent is considered negligent if they let their children get out of arms reach in public (and now are afraid to even let them go to school).

I and many others believe these heart-breaking changes are a result of our country turning away from the God of Love described in the pages of the Holy Bible. Decades ago we removed the Ten Commandments from the classroom walls, declared that "God was dead" and that science proved we didn't need Him anymore. One of the Ten Commandments is "Thou Shall Not Murder." When we asked God to leave, we invited the devil and his demons to enter. Jesus said the devil is a liar and a murderer and has been from the beginning.

John 8:44 You are of your father the devil, and the desires of your father you want to do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and does not stand in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaks a lie, he speaks from his own resources, for he is a liar and the father of it. NKJV

Our foolishness in rejecting God and His law is not working very well for us and it is time to repent. The God-haters won't let us bring the truth of God's law into the classroom, but we can certainly bring it into our homes and spread the message of forgiveness through faith in Jesus as our Savior to all who will listen.

In summary, no matter who pulled the trigger and killed those precious children, it was not a mental disease that was behind the act; it was pure evil, most likely a case of demonic possession and there is strong evidence that legal and illegal mind drugs are a gateway for demonic powers to take over the user's life. Therefore, I encourage the reader to seek the Lord Jesus for healing and a sound mind. It was Jesus who healed the man possessed by a legion of demons that were making him so violent that no one could come close. This same Jesus is alive today, sitting at the right hand of the Father and is there to save all those who call upon His name.

Luke 8:26-35. Then they sailed to the country of the Gadarenes, which is opposite Galilee. And when He stepped out on the land, there met Him a certain man from the city who had demons for a long time. And he wore no clothes, nor did he live in a house but in the tombs. When he saw Jesus, he cried out, fell down before Him, and with a loud voice said, "What have I to do with You, Jesus, Son of the Most High God? I beg You, do not torment me!" For He had commanded the unclean spirit to come out of the man. For it had often seized him, and he was kept under guard, bound with chains and shackles; and he broke the bonds and was driven by the demon into the wilderness. Jesus asked him, saying, "What is your name?" And he said, "Legion," because many demons had entered him. And they begged Him that He would not command them to go out into the abyss. Now a herd of many swine was feeding there on the mountain. So they begged Him that He would permit them to enter them. And He permitted them. Then the demons went out of the man and entered the swine, and the herd ran violently down the steep place into the lake and drowned. When those who fed them saw what had happened, they fled and told it in the city and in the country. Then they went out to see what had happened, and came to Jesus, and found the man from whom the demons had departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed and in his right mind. And they were afraid. NKJV