

Common Core Student Survey Wants Parents' Political Affiliation

Posted on October 17, 2013

Parents of high school students in Montgomery County School District in Maryland were outraged recently by a survey given to sophomores under the new Common Core education standards.

The survey asked numerous intrusive questions that a school has no business asking students. Among them were questions like "what is your sexual orientation," "what's your religion," "what's your parents' political affiliation" and "should assault rifles be banned?"

Angry parents notified the news website The Blaze about the survey, and shortly after a Blaze reporter began to ask about it, the survey disappeared from the Poolesville High School website.

According to The Blaze story, school officials at first denied such a survey existed, then when they were presented with evidence that it was on a school website, they denied that students were not given the right to opt out. When presented with evidence to the contrary, the district apparently took down the survey. Eventually, the district's public information officer admitted the survey had been on the site, but insisted that it was a student project, not something put together by teachers.

It appears that students presented with the survey had to log in with their usernames to a school support site called Edline, where they filled out the blanks and multiple choice questions on the survey.

In addition to the questions mentioned above, the survey also asked who was to blame for the government shutdown and how students felt about Obamacare. There was also this question: "If President Obama were Caucasian how much more or less criticism do you think he would receive?"

The school district's line on the survey is that it was created by students in a government class who were studying polls, and that the survey was strictly voluntary. According to parents, however, students in at least one class were told to take out their smart phones, log in to Edline and take the survey. Reportedly, one student who refused was "forced" by the teacher to comply.

The district also maintains that students taking the survey were anonymous, but a system operator who spoke with The Blaze on condition her real name not be used said it would be impossible for students to remain anonymous if they logged in to the Edline system.

At least one parent has claimed to have direct knowledge that the survey was not a voluntary student project but an assignment and that most of the questions were written by one teacher.

This is just the latest in a string of outrages from "Common Core-compliant" schools. The nationwide push for a uniform curriculum is fast becoming the education system's Obamacare.

Although the federal government is prohibited by law from creating a national curriculum, the Obama Administration has gotten around the law by pawing the job off on the National Governors Association. The NGA in turn pawed off the job on a private firm, which dumped it on the desk of a fellow named David Coleman, who has never been a classroom teacher. To make things even scarier...

Note from Pastor Kevin Lea: Stalin did it, Hitler did it, and now the nearly-here American dictator is doing it. Communist/tyrannical ideology requires that the people be controlled by the State. How? By forcing the people to think the way the elites wants them to think. They do so by giving the people the opportunity to submit to their propaganda voluntarily; or if necessary, by threats or by force.

These threats come in many ways. You will lose your job, you won't graduate from high school, you won't get admitted into college, you will get audited by the IRS, you won't be able to get into the doctor in time to save your life, etc., etc.

Obama and his ilk (including presidents before him) have placed political infrastructure in place to allow these pressures to be brought to bear against the people of America. The touted "Common Core" curriculum is just another cog in the wheel rolling us into an oppressive nightmare.

As stated in numerous other articles posted at our website, this should come as no surprise to the biblically literate Christian. It is so obvious that we are approaching the last days. The coming global government and global leader prophesied by Daniel and Revelation will not appear on the scene overnight. It has taken centuries for the elites in the various secret societies to get loyal personnel assets placed into powerful positions within finance, military, media and education across the globe. It may take more years or decades before "they" are convinced that everything is in place to pull the nationalistic rug out from under the feet of the ignorant masses and replace it with a global utopia (in their minds) of centralized rule by the elite.

Biblical Christians know that the "elite's" plans for utopia will actually lead to the death of billions and untold misery for the survivors. Jesus said that it would be a time of unprecedented tribulation, which will be followed by His physical return to earth to establish His kingdom of righteousness (Matthew 24).

It is our job as biblical Christians to warn the people that they will die and be separated from the God of love forever if they don't repent of their sin and turn to Jesus as their savior. Most reject God's offer of salvation, instead wanting to place their hope in themselves or in the government's ability to bring hope and peace during their short lives on earth. How sad that most people reject the living water offered by faith in Jesus and instead place their hope in man.

Be astonished, O heavens, at this, and be horribly afraid; be very desolate," says the Lord. 'For My people have committed two evils: They have forsaken Me, the fountain of living waters, And hewn themselves cisterns — broken cisterns that can hold no water. Jeremiah 2:12-13 NKJV

Thus says the Lord: "Cursed is the man who trusts in man and makes flesh his strength, whose heart departs from the Lord. For he shall be like a shrub in the desert, and shall not see when good comes, but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land which is not inhabited. Blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, and whose hope is the Lord. For he shall be like a tree planted by the waters, which spreads out its roots by the river, and will not fear when heat comes; but its leaf will be green, and will not be anxious in the year of drought, nor will cease from yielding fruit."

Jeremiah 17:5-8 NKJV

All things have been delivered to Me [Jesus] by My Father, and no one knows the Son except the Father. Nor does anyone know the Father except the Son, and the one to whom the Son wills to reveal Him. Come to Me, all you who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn from Me, for I am gentle and lowly in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For My yoke is easy and My burden is light." Matthew 11:27-30 NKJV
