

Globalists revving up plans to engineer global famine and starvation: 13 nations agree to convert over to less-productive 'green' farming methods

CCPO Note: The war in Ukraine and associated western sanctions against Russia has led to famine in Africa and food shortages and skyrocketing food and energy prices elsewhere. High energy and fertilizer costs, along with drought and other extreme weather events further indicate drastically reduced food production here at home, too. (See also a report on recent, unprecedented, and often unexplained catastrophes striking many U.S. food production facilities: naturalnews.com/2022-04-22-pattern-of-fires-striking-food-facilities-across-the-usa-suggests-arson.html). Now we see the globalists adding pressure on our already-threatened food supply by planning to impose "green" farming methods. Near the end of this article, Mr. Hohmann exhorts us to "Pray for the best while preparing for the worst. Because we know that the globalists' plan is to reduce the world population from 7.5 billion down to 1 or 2 billion."

Scripture foretold a devastating global famine 2,000 years ago: "When He opened the third seal, I heard the third living creature say, 'Come and see.' So I looked, and behold, a black horse, and he who sat on it had a pair of scales in his hand. And I heard a voice in the midst of the four living creatures saying, 'A quart of wheat for a denarius, and three quarts of barley for a denarius; and do not harm the oil and the wine.' [denotes food scarcity for all but the very wealthy]... So I looked, and behold... And power was given to them over a fourth of the earth, to kill with sword, with hunger, with death, and by the beasts of the earth" (Revelation 6:5-8).

These verses speak of the time just before and during the Tribulation Period, during which half of the world's population will die (Revelation 6:8, 9:15). Christians know that Jesus will appear to take us to be with Him before the Tribulation Period begins. Will you be one? The global climate cult is getting ready to kick its war on food into overdrive with 13 nations – many of them major cattle and food-producing states led by the United States, Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Spain – signing onto a commitment to place farmers under new restrictions intended to reduce emissions of methane gas.

The Global Methane Hub announced in a May 17 press release that agriculture and environmental ministers and ambassadors from 13 countries, including the United States, have signed a commitment that pledges to reduce methane emissions in agriculture. The U.S. was represented by Biden's climate czar, John Kerry. What does this mean and why should you care? We'll break it down.

According to the press release issued by these nations and posted at Global Methane Hub: "Last month (in April 2023), the Global Methane Hub collaborated with the Ministries of Agriculture of Chile and Spain to convene the first-ever global ministerial on agricultural practices to reduce methane emissions. The ministerial brought together high-ranking government members to share global perspectives on methane reduction and low-emission food systems. The gathering led to a statement in which the nations committed to support efforts to improve the quality and quantity of, and access to, finance for climate change adaptation and mitigation measures in the agriculture and food sectors and to collaborate on efforts aimed at lowering methane emissions in agriculture and food systems."

Conference participants included the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, Climate & Clean Air Coalition, Inter-American Institute for Cooperation on Agriculture, the World Bank, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, and the Inter-American Development Bank.

The World Bank, another creation of the post-World War II, U.S.-led liberal rules-based order, has been talking a lot lately, along with the U.N., about a coming famine. The World Bank issued a white paper just last week, on May 22, titled Food Security Update: World Bank Response to Rising Food Insecurity.

The director of the United Nations World Food Program has also been putting out, starting in September of last year, dire warnings about a coming global famine. So it's curious to me that, at the very time the globalists are warning about food shortages and famine, their mouthpieces at the World Bank, the U.N., and within the administrations of the U.S. and its allies (notice China and Russia are nowhere to be found in these preposterous anti-food policies), are talking about converting over to a new and unproven form of "sustainable" farming that's focused more on reducing methane than it is on producing the highest yields of food. Modern food production is bad, they tell us, because ...
