Costco egg recall for salmonella receives FDA's most severe designation

DECEMBER 27, 2024 · 4:35 PM ET

By Bill Chappell

The FDA says that people who bought 24-count packages of organic pasture-raised eggs with UPC 9661910680 under the Kirkland Signature brand — and also bearing the Julian code 327 and a use-by date of Jan 5, 2025 —

The Food and Drug Administration has classified its recall of eggs sold under Costco's Kirkland brand as a Class I recall, a designation reserved for instances of the highest potential health risk — including death.

A Class I recall signals that "there is a reasonable probability that the use of or exposure to a violative product will cause serious adverse health consequences or death," according to the FDA.

The agency announced the voluntary recall on Nov. 27 and posted news of the Class I designation on Dec. 20; it has not provided updates about whether any possible illnesses or medical cases related to the recall.

Neither the agency nor Costco responded to NPR's messages for comment on Friday.

"Eggs from a positive Salmonella environment were shipped into distribution to retail facilities," according to the FDA. Handsome Brook Farms said the eggs hadn't been intended for retail sales — but were mistakenly packaged and distributed.
